Nine Year Old Girl Saves Twin Brother From Kidnapers

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Bobby Burns, not so many years ago, wished for the gift to see ourselves as others see us.

This would come in handy when reading an Englishman's or German's impressions of the United States.

"New York Nights," written by Stephen Graham, is perhaps one of the best studies of New York that was ever made by an Englishman. Graham came to the United States unprejudiced and has written a most entertaining book.

South America is a very touchy subject for most of the travel writers.

Harry Franck in his "Vagabonding Down the Andes," has written a most entertaining book on the customs of the southern republic.

But—some Americans who have made the same trip, declare that Franck was prejudiced.

And the natives of Peru are quite up in arms about his chapters on Peru.

Harry L. Foster is another entertaining travel writer. His "Adventures of a Tropical Tramp" is well worth while.

America, it seems, loves to be insulted—especially by the British authors and lecturers.

An Englishman will come to New York, spend two weeks, and then return home to write a volume on social conditions in America.

Stephen Leacock, the Canadian humorist, who is at times more American than Canadian was among the many who were badly hurt by a certain Englishman who visited the United States in 1920, and wrote a garbled account of his travels.

Leacock packed an extra pair of socks and a toothbrush and started for England.

Upon his return to the United States, he wrote a travel book about England that is a masterpiece of satire.

Which all reminds us that an English friend is quite shocked at our pronunciation of Berkeley, declaring that the correct pronunciation of it is "Bark-lee."

As if anyone cares about that.

POLICE HUNT MYSTERY AUTO

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—Screaming at the top of her lungs little nine year old Betty Conway today proved herself a heroine by foiling an attempt by two men to kidnap her twin brother Billy.

Not only did little Betty frighten away the would-be kidnapers but she memorized the license number of the automobile in which they were riding.

The kidnaping attempt took place at Broadway and Webster streets as the children were returning from school.

Girl Screams

While waiting for the traffic to clear, a small closed automobile with two men in it drew up alongside the children.

"Come on little boy and we'll give you a ride," one of the young men is reported to have said, as he reached for the boy. Billy leaped back out of reach, and his sister Betty commenced screaming.

As the men continued coaxing the boy to enter the car, Betty screamed louder.

A machine directly behind the mystery car, combined with the screams of the nine year old girl, frightened the men off, and they sped down the street.

Chase Given

Larry Downing, 1103 Greenwich street, driver of the second car gave chase to the one bearing the two young men, but lost it after a chase of a few blocks.

He did however, secure the license number, which corresponded with the number obtained by the girl.

Police were checking ownership of the car late tonight and expected to locate the owner shortly.

DEATH TOLL IN TORNADO IN SOUTHWEST SET AT 66

DALLAS, Texas, May 7.—UP—Tornado beleaguered Texas emerged from one of the most devastating storms in its history, while citizens, fearful of further wrath from the skies, checked up the tremendous toll of dead and injured.

Howling black funnels streaked and churned across the countryside for hours during the height of the storms last night. They demolished every structure in their path and killed or maimed almost every living thing.

Nearly the whole eastern half of the state felt the lash of the wind. Much of the area was a shambles when finally the roaring clouds disappeared in a series of cloudbursts over the chaotic scene more than three score persons were dead, more than 100 were injured. Two towns were moved to splinters, a dozen others were ruined partially, whole flocks of livestock were killed and hundreds of farms were ravished.

Deaths Huge

So widespread were the tornadoes and so rapidly did they crush life wherever they bounced to earth, that it was exceptionally difficult to tabulate an accurate death list. Relief workers first placed the dead at 40, then at 53, and finally at 66, after they found that some of their lists were duplicated.

Frost and Nordheim, prosperous southeastern agricultural towns, felt the brunt of the horror dealing elements. Rescuers recovered 25 bodies in the wreckage which a few hours before had been in Nordheim, and 23 more in the community of 1200 population.

Whole families were crushed in their homes. Other houses caught fire after collapsing and burned their injured inhabitants to death.

Tots Saved

The tornado ripped off the roof of the Frost schoolhouse, but the 250 children at their studies miraculously escaped injury.

Customers of two banks saved themselves from certain death as they crowded into the steel vaults at first approach of the twister. The buildings caved in around them but they all emerged safely in the ruins after the storm had passed.

The tornadoes plowed in erratic and gigantic circles about the eastern half of the state, ripping successively into Waco, Kennedy, Bynum, Spur, Euless, Ennis, San Antonio and Brown.

State Aid

The gale, meanwhile, reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour at Abilene. Buildings there were ruined, while citizens were blinded by the stinging sand swept on by the wind in clouds so dense they seemed almost like boulders.

Property damage also was reported at Childress, Kirkland, Ranger, Sustit Fort Worth, Mineral Wells, Ennis and Bowie.

Governor Dan Moody at Austin announced that the state would aid all storm swept areas with funds and supplies, to be administered by the national guard.

PRESIDENT SILENT ON DEFEAT

WASHINGTON, May 7.—UP—"The years are 39 and the nays are 41," droned vice-president Charles Curtis in senate chambers today, "and the nomination is rejected."

So in a day, or two a formal message to President Hoover will say:

"The senate refuses to advise and consent to the nomination of John J. Parker of North Carolina to be an associate justice of the supreme court."

On the issues of labor and of negro rights, the senators of both parties from the south and west defeated the President.

First Rejection

It was the first supreme court nomination to be rejected by the senate in 36 years, and doubly significant because it was based on Parker's record as a federal judge in upholding a yellow-dog anti-union contract injunction, and his ill-white republicanism, as demonstrated in North Carolina politics.

The vote came by pre-arrangement at 1:30 p. m., in the eighth day of senate debate, after a terrific struggle between the historically antagonistic legislative and executive departments—a struggle in which Hoover and several members of his cabinet, and Circuit Judge Parker himself, made personal appeals in defense of the 44-year old southern republican—a battle in which vote bartering was barred—a contest in which every senator was deluged with hundreds of thousands of appeals from lawyers, judges and national leaders on the one side, and from spokesmen for labor, negroes and liberals on the other.

NINE KILLED, MANY INJURED AS HINDUS BATTLE POLICE

LONDON, May 8.—Thursday—UP—Many police officers and excise staff officials were reported to be injured in a riot at the town of Ranaghat north of Calcutta, a dispatch from Calcutta to the Daily Mail said today.

A native mob stormed the police station in an attempt to release two volunteers, followers of Mahatma Gandhi, the dispatch said.

NINE KILLED IN BOMBAY

BOMBAY, May 7.—UP—Nine more lives paid the toll of India's struggle against British rule during the 48 hours of surging turmoil which followed the arrest of their leader, Mahatma Gandhi, now in the Yeroda jail.

Four rebels were killed and two captured in an action today on the bank of the Karnafuli, opposite Chittagong in Bengal. A villager was slain accidentally during the clash, and a constable and four others were hurt.

The fighting at Delhi during the Hariol or religious strike, resulted in four deaths and hundreds were painfully injured as firebrands followed by Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign broke the bounds of their leaders' program and sought to overturn street cars.

More than 70,000 mill workers were off the job during the Hariol protest, stopping 41 mills. They returned to work today, however, although a slight disturbance occurred at the Standard mill. The employees refused to start work and mill. They staged a small police force until reinforcements charged the crowd and dispersed the agitators. Order was restored quickly.

Comparative calm prevailed in most places during the day, the British firmly seeking to make permanent the present precarious peace.

SA FRANCISCO, May 7.—UP—Seven year old James De Laney became excited here today when police began to question him about the death of Camille Ronades, 45, whom they believe might have been poisoned. "You fellows aren't thinking I did it, are you?" James demanded in an exasperated tone.

Trees and signs were blown down in coast communities, but no injuries were reported up to a late hour.

FULL PARITY URGED BY SOLON

WASHINGTON, May 7.—UP—A 1931 navy appropriation bill carefully framed to carry out the London treaty pledges was put before the House today as two Senate committees made plans for hearings on the treaty next week.

In deference to the fact that the Senate has not yet ratified the treaty, the House appropriation committee rewrote its report to eliminate an unqualified endorsement of the treaty which its naval subcommittee had made.

The appropriation bill carries $31,100,000 for work on ten of the 15 big cruisers authorized by Congress in 1929 and other funds for modernizing two battleships and starting submarines and aircraft carriers.

The bill carries a total of $279,036,086 of which only $49,400,000 is for new ship building. This is nearly two million dollars under President Hoover's budget estimate but $13,351,059 over the last navy annual appropriation.

Senator David Reed, Republican, Penn., a London conference delegate just returned from abroad urged in conference with the press, construction of ships by this country to the full limit permitted by this bill.

This, he said, would cost $100,000,000 a year for seven years.

Meanwhile Chairman Britten of the House naval committee delayed while his introduction of a somewhat more ambitious naval program bill calling for one billion dollars in a 10 year program to await further data from the Navy department.

MECHANICS NINE BEATS REFINERY IN S. O. CONTEST

LARGE CROWD WITNESSES FAST GAME AT FIRST STREET

The Mechanics yesterday afternoon took the Refinery team down the line by the score of 7 to 5 in the first game of the newly revived Standard Oil Twilight baseball league.

The league season was officially opened when Paul Osborn, manager of the local Standard Oil plant pitched the first ball of the 1930 league season to F. H. Smith, superintendent of the refinery.

Howard French, president of the Standard Oil Baseball association from 1919 to 1927, was presented a pen and pencil set by Osborn in the name of the association.

Ceremonies Held
Flag raising ceremonies were performed by several Boy Scouts of Richmond immediately preceding the contest.

The great crowd that turned out yesterday to see the league go into action witnessed a game that was closely fought for seven innings. Bunched hits were the order of the day, and neither team was sure of its standing until the last Refinery batter struck out.

The Mechanics started the scoring in the second when Ellison chased home. O'Rourke and Ellison garnered two more counters for the Mechanics in the third inning. "Chick" Autry scored in the last half of the same period for the Refinery. The Mechanics continued the scoring in the fourth inning when Gosney crossed home plate. Loveland and O'Rourke added two more runs to the Mechanics' score in the fifth, while Gregory, Mechanic outfielder, gained one more in the sixth.

It looked pretty black for the Refinery at this period of the game, with the score 7 to 1 in favor of the Mechanics. However, the Refinery squad rallied in the last of the sixth to collect four runs, making the score 5 to 7. The four runs were made by Lane, Johnson, Zimmerman, and Armentrout. This ended the scoring of last night's hectic battle.

Schmidt Pitches
Schmidt occupied the mound for the victorious Mechanics, allowing but five hits, fanning seven Refinery sluggers, and walking three. Wolfram started in the box for the Refinery, but was replaced in the fifth by Peacock, who finished the game. Wolfram allowed four hits, two walks and fanned three. Peacock was picked for four hits, and fanned four Mechanics. He allowed five walks. The lone home run of the game was gained by Ellison of the Mechanics.

The Barrel House will meet the All Standards this afternoon at five o'clock in the second game of the Standard Oil league. The game will be played at First street.

PRICE PLANS CHANGE IN TEAM

BERKELEY, May 7.—The University of California football team will look a good deal different from the 1929 model, if indications of the final week of the spring practice holds good a few short months from now.

Coach C. M. "Nibs" Price has completely remodeled his backfield, and sectors of his line. While the average fan will not see these changes until the last week of September, Price, his corps of assistants and 48 players are hard at work this week, two sessions each day, perfecting the new machine.

The most radical changes are in the backfield. The Golden Bears will have power a-plenty if they choose to use it. Ed Griffiths, quarterback (instead of at half as in 1929); Clarence "Moose" Garrity and Joe Hickingbotham, both of whom were fullbacks last year, at half, and the hard-hitting Ralston "Rusty" Gill at fullback. The weight will be there too—750 pounds of it, according to last year's weights—and Griffiths and Gill both look to be heavier now.

Other backfield changes include the conversion of Bill McCutcheon from half to quarter; Ulrich Fritsch, 1929 freshman, from quarter to half; Sheldon Potter, from quarter to half; Joe Smith, Al Castro, 1929 freshman, and Laverne Binder from half to full.

In the line, Ted Beckett has been shifted from tackle to running guard to fill the shoes of Joe Pitto. Sam Gill, fourth of the Gills, who was an enterprising freshman last year, will understudy him. Capt. Carl Handy is to take Bert Schwartz' place at the other guard post. Henry Trotter, formerly a tackle, will play at guard. Eugene Elering an end last year, has been shifted to running guard. In most other respects the line will remain the same.

The mixture of light and heavy halfbacks will give the Bears a chance to use both weight and power and speed and deception in their offensive thrusts. Ed Kirwan, who is fault not unlike Lee Eisan, will act as field general, while the heavier Griffiths is off the field. Joel Corfield may be the much-discussed successor to Ben Lom in the passing end of the game. Grid fans will undoubtedly see a highly diversified style of attack, with the chancing of sets of backs for each style.

Following are the 48 players who are on training table this week:

ENDS—Russ Avery, Oakland; Jack DeBenedetti, San Mateo; Ralph Stone, Petaluma; Robert Bartlett, Berkeley; Louis DiResta, San Francisco; George Garner, Porterville; James Francis, San Jose; and Louis Hotopp, Berkeley.

TACKLES—Fritz Cahn, Mission Beach; Dolph Timmerman, Eureka; Gerald Easterbrooke, of Long Beach; Malcolm Coombs, Healdsburg; Seldon Del Giorgio, Fullerton; Nick Bican, Sacramento; Bob Neuhaus, Berkeley; George Bivaschi, Santa Rosa; G. W. Premo, Bakersfield and Dick Tozer, Venice.

GUARDS—Capt. Carl Handy,

Angels Trounce Missions While Sacs Beat Oaks

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—UP—The Los Angeles Angels held the leadership of the Pacific Coast league today by beating the San Francisco Missions, 14 to 4, while Sacramento was trouncing Oakland, 14 to 0, the Angels increased their percentage to .629 and the Senators had 630.

Oakland dropped to third place, less than half a game ahead of the San Francisco Seals, who beat Hollywood, 4 to 3.

Two big innings, the fourth and the eighth, gave the Angels their big total. They made six runs in the fourth on four singles and a double, five runs in the eighth on three singles, a double and two Mission errors.

Ray Keating shut out the Oaks, only one Oakland player reaching third base during the encounter. Keating allowed five hits, each of them singles, and all in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Two errors and a single let the Seals score twice in the first inning. Another error and a single in the seventh accounted for two more runs and victory for San Francisco.

Rain, again interfered with the contest between Portland and Seattle.

INFLUENZA

By DR. G. A. ESTERBERG

Influenza is a disease that appears at irregular intervals, but since the great pandemic of 1889-1890, the world has never been entirely free from its sinister influence. Some place on the globe seems to be afflicted with it all the time.

An epidemic in any one locality usually lasts from six to eight weeks and is more severe as a rule in the seasons lacking sunshine although it may appear at any time.

Influenza is characterized by the rapidity with which it spreads and the large number of persons it attacks—40 percent of the population being the average. Neither is it a respecter of age or sex. The incubation period (the time when exposed to the germs causing the disease to the time of the materialization in symptoms) is from one to four days.

The onset is generally sudden and begins with the general symptoms of chills and fever accompanied by great prostration.

Respiratory tract type begins with the symptoms of a cold. It is accompanied by symptoms of marked prostration and drowsiness.

This is usually followed by a cough and high fever with or without delirium. The cough is often very severe when the disease reaches the finer bronchioles and may continue a serious symptom. The respiratory type is often complicated by the development of pneumonia and pleurisy.

Gastro-intestinal type appears with the special symptom of fever, nausea and vomiting or severe abdominal pain and diarrhea.

Nervous type—characterized by severe headache, pain in the back and joints. Those afflicted with this type of influenza are particularly prone to melancholia following the attack.

The fever may be remittent with chills and simulate malaria or it may be protracted, lasting for weeks, and simulate typhoid fever.

One of the most characteristic features of influenza is the extreme prostration that is out of all proportion to the severity of the general symptoms. This prostration persists for an indefinite time and constitutes one of the most disagreeable accompaniments of the disease.

An astonishing number of people trace ill-health to the door of influenza. "I have never been well since I had the flu" is a common bit of history recorded with many cases of chronic illness. The toxins of the disease seem to have a particular affinity for the adrenal glands—a fact which explains many of its after-effects. This accounts for the extreme prostration and has much to do with the depression of spirits which is one of the most stubborn and unpleasant accompaniments of the flu.

Every case of influenza should be treated seriously. Care should be used to prevent its spread. Put the patient to bed until all evidence of the fever has abated. Keep the bowels open, feed the patient light, nutritious food and give them plenty of air. Make the surroundings as pleasant as possible.

At the onset a warm bath is sometimes comforting and gives relief for the pains in the back and limbs. The bath should be warm and the patient must run no chance of being chilled.

It is well to remember that one attack confers no immunity against another attack. The best way to avoid influenza is to build a healthy body and keep it healthy by sane eating and rational living. Above all, do not let the toxins of flu remain in your system. To do so is to invite all kinds of future ills.

Seven Nurses Will Resign From Hospital

MARTINEZ, May 7.—With the announcement today that seven nurses in the county hospital here had submitted or would submit their resignations, to become effective Saturday, internal strife which has been reported simmering for some time came to a climax.

Some of those leaving the institution said their resignations were prompted by their opposition to the reported scheduled appointment of Mrs. Della Ronge as superintendent of nurses to succeed Mrs. Marie Blum who resigned to become superintendent of nurses at the new municipal hospital.

Others merely said they were going "with Mrs. Blum."

Dr. E. W. Merrithew, hospital head, declared he had not received any of the resignations, and had not yet appointed a nurse to succeed Mrs. Blum. Recently the doctor asked the board of supervisors whether the law permitted him to name to the superintendent, an alien who has made application for citizenship papers.

In making his interrogation, Dr. Merrithew said he referred to Mrs. Susie McArthur, one of the nurses who is reported to be considering resigning.

Although the board did not give an unqualified answer they indicated belief that such an appointment would not be permissible.

The nurses who said they had or would submit their resignations are: Mrs. McArthur, Mrs. Ida Love, Mrs. Laura Starkey, Miss Ann Jones, Mrs. Wilma Henderson, Mrs. Katherine Wilson, and Miss Ethel Smith.

Mrs. Olive Craig was in charge of the refreshments and Mrs. George Jewell was in charge of the decorations, which were of California lilacs and roses.

Mrs. George Black presided.

WESTERN STAR HAS GRIPPING STORY

Richard Arlen's best friend, a young rancher is shot and killed by a mysterious assassin. Arlen suspects Fred Kohler, a Western badman in league with the crooked sheriff. On a spree, declares he will marry the first woman he meets.

The woman happens to be Mary Brian, sister of the dead rancher, who has just arrived in town to take charge of her brother's ranch. Arlen's roush proposal is insulting to Mary, and when he realizes his fault, he is conscious-stricken. Arlen arranges with Harry Green, a comic peddler to take Mary to the ranch.

Green offers to secure cowboys for Mary and she accepts. When he introduces Arlen as one of the men he has recruited, she won't hire them. They leave, but return later to save her from attack by Kohler who has come to inform Mary that the ranch is his, he declaring he purchased the property for the past due taxes. Arlen's help forces Mary to relent and she agrees to hire him and his boys.

Arlen believes Kohler paid the taxes with gold stolen from Mary's brother. Through a ruse, he and his pals steal the gold from the sheriff's office and pay Mary's taxes with it.

Arlen, now thoroughly in love with Mary, is hurt and disappointed when Regis Toomey, an avowed suitor, arrives at the ranch and proceeds to take charge. Arlen thinks Mary loves Toomey. He resents Toomey's officiousness and a fist fight between them is only prevented by the arrival of Kohler and a sheriff's posse—come to arrest Arlen for stealing the gold. Arlen and the cowboys barricade themselves in the ranchhouse.

Kohler and his men surround the house, but Arlen, taking a desperate chance, runs to the corral and stampedes the horses towards Kohler's men. He captures Kohler and forces him to confess he killed Mary's brother and stole his gold. Kohler attempts to break away and is killed in a running duel. Arlen is wounded.

When Arlen returns to consciousness in the ranchhouse, Toomey congratulates him. Mary has realized that she loves Arlen.

This picture will be shown at the Fox-California theater today and tomorrow. Also in the program is a talking comedy "The Wife's Birthday."

WAR MOTHERS PROGRAM PLANNED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—World War Mothers of all nationalities, regardless of the country for which their sons fought, will be honored by the 380 posts of the American Legion in California on May 11, Mothers' day by special programs.

One of the most extensive of the programs will be that of San Francisco Post No. 1 of the Legion, at which State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid of Hollywood will be one of the principal speakers.

A special Mothers' day message has been sent to the World War Veterans of California by State Commander Kincaid. The war veterans' commander says:

"The sweetest, most gracious and lovable remembrance that comes to us is Mother's Day which we celebrate annually in May. Those of us who have any sense at all know that Mother's Day is every day; but in the fast, kaleidoscopic life we live, we must be helped to be reminded that such an occasion as Mothers' Day is really in our calendar. The elder we get the fewer mothers there are left to comfort us, and then in retrospection, there unfolds that picture of our dear old Mother, white-haired, knitting some little article for some one near and dear to her, always reminding and living in the past; gray-haired bespectacled Mother, to whom we can always go, for that solace and comfort that no one else can give."

"There seems to be no depth of degradation and sorrow or walls and bars of steel through which a Mother's love will not penetrate. Her boy and her girl are always right, even when she knows they are wrong. No wonder we think of Mother's Day and celebrate the spirit of its occasion with a deep feeling of gratitude for what she has been to us. To the lad away from home who has forgotten to write, it is an opportune time to send a message to the one person in the world who will enjoy receiving it. To the one whose Mother has gone, never to return, it is an opportune time for rendering that silent prayer to her memory, that her son or daughter may live more nobly and more sympathetically while traveling the pathway of life towards the setting sun of human existence."

Goitre Not A Disease

MILWAUKEE DOCTOR MAKES REMARKABLE DISCOVERY
Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. E-53, Box 137, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cures all over the country with astonishing results. The doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. Write him today.—Adv.

Vet Aid Asked In State-Wide Safety Drive

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—American Legion posts in every county of California have been directed to take the lead in a statewide community safety campaign to reduce the number of accidents in this state, according to State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid of Hollywood. The 380 posts of the Legion have been directed to join with local civic organizations in the big drive as part of the program of the community betterment commission of the Legion, headed by Hollis Thompson, of Berkeley.

Chairman Thompson has sent out the following message to the world war veterans: "In the event that your community does not have, in active operation, a traffic safety program, there must be one begun by your post at once. As a destroyer of life, the automobile today is more deadly than were the enemy bullets in 1917-18. Statistics show that 125 Californians were killed or died from wounds during the 18 months our country was engaged in the world war, while the automobile took its toll during the year of 1928, of 1827. This an average monthly harvest of 155.8, as compared to the 66.6 credited to the God of War. Our battle losses during the world war were 52,849. The automobile fatalities in the United States in 1928 were more than 25,127."

The American Legion is carrying on a general program of education among its membership in the effort to reduce accidents in California.

RIO RITA TO END RUN TONIGHT

Bebe Daniels and John Boles sing their famous love duet for the last time tonight from the screen of the Richmond theater.

"Rio Rita" the all-talking, all-musical Radio Pictures extravaganza, closes a 3 day run with its last performance this evening.

The film version of the Zeigfeld stage hit has had an eminently successful stay at the Richmond theater. The first talker to draw successive "repeats" among local film fans, the tuneful romance of the Rio Grande country has been declared the most sumptuous spectacle screened here.

With many of its scenes in technicolor, with sets and costumes and a cast of hundreds, the Radio Pictures version of "Rio Rita" may be truly said to have "out-glorified" even Zeigfeld himself.

Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Don Alvarado, Eva Rosita and Georges Renavent head the large supporting cast which Luther Reed directed.

The score with several new numbers in addition to the original music of the stage production, was written by Harry Tierney, composer of "Kitt Poots," "Trene" and other musical comedy successes.

Council Favors Legion's Stand

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—By a unanimous vote, the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles has approved the stand taken recently by the executive committee of the American Legion regarding the employment of foreign and alien labor in the construction of state improvements.

In a letter to State Adjutant J. K. Kelly of the Legion, J. W. Buzzell, secretary-treasurer of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, declared that "the labor movement of Los Angeles appreciates the interests of the American Legion" in its campaign to provide that on state and other public construction work, preference be given to American citizens as a means of reducing unemployment and of aiding in the reduction of the unemployment of American citizens.

CITY'S GROWTH FORCES GRAVE DIGGING

LOS ANGELES.—Old Calvary cemetery, one of the oldest burying grounds in southern California, is being swallowed up by the advance of Los Angeles.

Already in the downtown district surrounded by buildings, and traffic and noise of the modern scene, a murmur of the past seems to hover over the old cemetery.

Although the order for disinterment was issued nearly five years ago, the work of removing the bodies to New Calvary cemetery started only recently.

The cemetery was established when the one at the Plaza became over full. The northeast quarter of the cemetery was given to the church of Don Francisco de Avila and Senor Sepulveda de Avila in 1800.

Where identification has been possible, the descendants of those buried in Old Calvary cemetery are to pay the expense connected with the disinterment, but because of the age of the cemetery, the task of finding claimants to the bodies has been difficult.

Task Difficult

When the Old Calvary site was chosen, it was "away out in the country." Bodies were buried 20 to 24 feet deep, and at times members of a family would be buried one on top of another.

When the original Old Calvary was filled, the church acquired additional land and the new portion was consecrated with solemn ceremonies in 1866.

The records of the Los Angeles bureau of vital statistics list the last burial in Old Calvary as one Frank Villabos who died Jan. 7, 1897.

The records of the bureau date back to 1877, but places of burial were not listed until 1890. The records show that during those seven years, the old burying ground was used less and less frequently, and was finally closed in 1897.

Official Upholds Back Seat Driver

FRESNO.—After this when the back seat driver speaks up it is the better part of wisdom to listen, according to Leon Whitsell, state railroad commissioner.

In a luncheon talk here Whitsell said that in 60 percent of all railroad grade crossing accidents in California there was only one occupant of the car involved, and therefore no opportunity for a "backseat driver" to warn the real driver.

Whitsell said it merely boiled down to the fact that four eyes are better than two.

New Turf For U. C. Stadium

BERKELEY, May 6.—After repeated attempts to secure turf suitable for the playing field of the California Memorial stadium, athletic authorities of the University of California believe that a solution of the problem has been reached in the use of a wiry bent grass from Oregon, planted in stolon some eight inches below the surface of the gridiron.

Work is now nearing completion and the field will be ready for the 1930 football season. Jack P. McKenzie, assistant graduate manager, believes that the new turf will make the stadium one of the best playing fields on the Pacific coast. The work is being done at a cost of $1700.

Over 200 sacks of turf were brought from Oregon. After preparations of the field the stolon—slender branches or shoots growing at or near the base of the parent plants—were put in the ground. Astoria bent seed is to be planted on the surface. The two bents are expected to form a tough, heavy sod from eight inches to a foot thick which will defy the pounding and tearing of cleats during the season.

4 BIG LEAGUE LEADERS LOSE

First division teams found rough going Wednesday, the four leaders losing to second division opponents. With all of the leaders losing there were no changes in standings, the Philadelphia Athletics and Cleveland Indians remaining in a tie for first with Washington third and Chicago fourth.

Third Baseman Sammy Hale traded to the St. Louis Browns by the Athletics last winter, kept his former teammates from taking the league lead when his home run with Blue on base gave the Browns a 2 to 1 victory over the champions.

Babe Ruth's fourth home run of the season with two men on base in the fourth inning climaxed a five run rally which gave the New York Yankees an 8 to 7 win over the Cleveland Indians.

Earl Whitehill allowed but six hits and the Detroit Tigers defeated Washington, 3 to 1. Sam Rice of the Senators ran his consecutive hitting streak to 18 games and Buddy Myer ran his errorless games to 19.

Tom Oliver, Boston's youthful Rookie outfielder, made four hits in five times up to run his consecutive hitting streak to 16 games and to give the Red Sox a 5 to 4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

National League: Chicago's Cubs advanced to within .006 points of a tie for the National league lead, defeating Brooklyn, 9 to 5. Charley Root allowed the Robins 12 hits, including two homers by Bissonette and one by Wright.

Four New York Giants' pitchers were unable to stop Pittsburgh and the Pirates defeated the league leaders 6 to 3. Bob O'Farrell's home run with two on base drove Brame from the mound in the fifth but Swetonic stopped the Giants' attack.

Successive doubles by Bob Meusel and George Kelly gave Benny Frey his second shutout victory in three starts as Cincinnati defeated the Boston Braves, 1 to 0.

Eight pitchers saw action as the St. Louis Cards and Philadelphia battled to stay out of the cellar, the Cards winning 16 to 11. The two teams made a total of 35 hits, including homers by Watkins, Hafey, Thompson, Sigman and Hurst. A nine run rally in the fifth gave St. Louis the winning runs.

COMPOSITION WORK SHOWN

According to a survey of pupils work on display at the Lincoln school, surprising results have been returned from an attempt to raise the composition and short story writing standards of elementary school pupils. The display has been arranged for inspection of school officials and parents or others interested may view the exhibit.

Nystrom, Lincoln and Stage schools were visited yesterday, and Fairmont, Kensington and Harding will be visited today.

A noteworthy point of the exhibit, is the high standard of penmanship turned out by the children, which in most cases is nearly perfect. The compositions prepared by the first grades are for the most part short, printed, and illustrated with crayon drawings. All are original.

In the higher classes, some compositions are written on the blackboards and some on paper, which are mounted and put on display.

School Groups Will Present Play Here Soon

Cotton Picking minstrels of Berkeley will be the featured entertainers of the San Pablo and Richmond Union high school P. T. A. tonight at the high school auditorium. Proceeds will be used for purchasing supplies for the students.

In addition to the minstrels, numbers will be presented by members of Miss Matilda Meyer's Kiddies, with the following children participating:

Elaine McConnell, Betty Archibald, Meyna Latorraca, Helen Collins, Shirley Orthman, Shirley Hornberg, Arlene Coe, Jeanne Jol Hansen, Dorothy Heyne, Helen Yohs, Betty Jean Alvares, Genevieve Messenger, Beverly Penman Raverna Lovdahl, Gladys Blount, Lauvenia Murray, Georgina Mayer Carmen McQueen, Frances Neville Annabelle Tarr, Geraldine Price, Florence Kays, accompanied by Miss Emma Meyer.

HORSE THIEVES RESUME WORK IN IDAHO

POCATELLO, Ida.—Horse thieves apparently inactive for many years since the "rangeland" disappeared under fences, have swung into activity again in southeastern Idaho.

They are not the picturesque story book characters of the old west; they don't swoop silently down on a ranch herd the animals out and push them fast to get them into a hidden box canyon, or over a border, where brands are changed. Instead, they creep into fenced pastures, lead out plow and other work animals, tie them to the back of a car, and take them to the nearest railroad shipping point.

Many times the brands are not changed; the horses are not turned over to other stockmen. They are shipped to the last resting place of worn out, useless horses—the cannery factory, where they are converted into dog meat.

Numerous valuable animals have disappeared from southeastern Idaho farms, and it is feared that they have found their way to canning factories in Butte, Mont., or elsewhere. The factories pay $5 per head for animals some of the horses that have been reported missing have been valued at $100 and more.

The business is sometimes done on a larger scale, whenever horses are obtainable. A Port Hall Indian lost 27 head one night. On another occasion, a motorist unwittingly thwarted a movement of stolen horses when he hit one of 55 animals being driven along the highway north of here. The horse was killed, and the rustlers had disappeared when a Blackfoot sheriff arrived to investigate.

Burglars Don't seek the Limelight

DARKNESS is their stock in trade. They work by stealth—unheard and unseen—their movements cloaked in secrecy. It's honest folks that seek the light. They are the only ones who can risk it.

It's the same way in business. The manufacturer or the merchant who is not sure of his goods, does not dare to advertise. Advertising would hasten the end of his business career—put him to a test he could not meet.

The man who advertises, deliberately invites your inspection. He tells you about his product or his merchandise and then lets it stand on its own merits.

You can depend on him. He knows his product is good.

That's one reason why it pays you to read the advertisements you find in the columns of this paper. It is through advertising that you are able to keep in touch with the good things that progressive business men are spending their money to introduce and to keep before you.

Advertisements are interesting, instructive and profitable. They throw a powerful light on the very things that concern you most. Read them.

THE WOMAN OF IT

A Husband's Nine Ways to Keep a Wife

MISS JENNIE PARTRIDGE of San Francisco has just set forth, for the California Federation of Women's Clubs, nine ways of keeping a husband, and, since we thought that a spinster's advice on this subject should be supplemented by a married woman's, we offered nine more rules yesterday. Plenty of husbands, however, to judge by the divorce records, are unable to keep their wives, and it's time somebody gave them tips. For the benefit of the men, and with the advice and consent of one of them, we therefore suggest to-day a husband's nine ways for keeping a wife healthy, happy and in love, as follows:

1. Be a lover as well as a husband. Continue to practice the graces and gallantries of courtship; they're not so excessive, as things go now. But, just because he marries her, a man need not stop sending flowers to the girl he loves, or paying her compliments, or telling her that he loves her!

2. Make your marriage companionate in the best sense of the word—that is, make your wife your about companion. Tell her about your work, her to be interested in it, and—when possible—let her share it, as Col.

Lindbergh shares his flights with Mrs. Lindbergh. Confide your exact financial situation and ask your wife to co-operate in saving as well as spending. Give her a chance to share your fun in playing golf, or in fishing, or in whatever may be your chosen recreation.

3. Be as interested in her affairs and ideas as you want her to be in yours. If she, too, has a job outside the home, encourage her to talk about it; if she is a homemaker, don't be bored with her spontaneous recital of domestic successes and failures.

4. Don't criticize your wife's appearance even jokingly. It never makes a hit with a woman for her husband to ridicule the increasing weight which she valiantly combats, or to observe pleasantly that she isn't so young as she used to be, or to remark that "a woman of her age" ought to be glad long skirts are back.

5. Never try to pull the "master in the house" stuff. The modern married woman simply will not stand for dictation—as you should see? For every question which comes up between husband and wife there is a reasonable answer, and his willingness to discuss and compromise keeps not only her happiness but her respect for him.

6. Get new lines, now and then. If there's one little thing which makes even a devoted wife feel like flying to the opposite end of the world is hearing for the umpteenth time the story of how you first went around in par at the club, or the joke about Pat and Mike.

7. Don't wobble off on your wife's irritations arising from causes for which she is in no way responsible. If the boss calls you down for not getting a contract, or if you are late for a party, or if you have a speech match pained, or if you suffer from a morning-after headache, don't snap and snarl at the breakfast or dinner table. Not merely the temporary unpleasantness but the basic injustice of the proceeding, repels any woman.

8. Don't be absent-minded. A woman naturally is a "noticing" person, especially in affairs connected with those whom she loves. So when her husband fails to notice her new dress, or the special dessert she cooked for him, or her newly contracted cold—when he absent-mindedly forgets to mail her letters—she is convinced that, if he cared for her, he'd be different, and a small seed of estrangement is sown.

9. Put no other gods—or goddesses—before her. Never allow her to feel that your children or your parents or your work or your ambitions are more important to you than she and her love. For the surest way of gaining and keeping the love of a wife is to convince her that, above everything else in the world, she is wanted and NEEDED by the man she marries!

When you to your manhood grow, Will another's love you know? Reading deep within her eyes Dreams you both may realize? Will I know a mother's pang? Too the Great God's awful fang? Son of mine, too young to see

A DISH A DAY

By Karen Hollis

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

THE first I printed a recipe forveal Hongroise, requests have been pouring in for more Hungarian dishes. Obviously, Hungarian methods of cooking have made a great hit with readers who had never been introduced to this country's native delicacies.

Since most of the requests were for casseroles, I am going to tell you how to make two kinds of casseroles that make an almost daily appearance on Hungarian tables. Their desserts are practically always made of fruit, but they seem the simple compotes so popular in France. Refrigeration is so rare even in their cities that frozen sherbets are almost unknown outside of their confectionery shops. Their home desserts are almost always cakes and tarts.

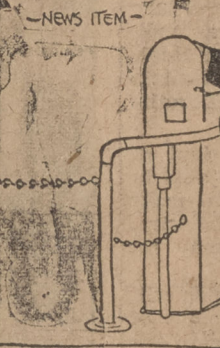

Hungarian plum cake is easily prepared and is excellent for a dinner that is to be cooked entirely in the oven. For this canned plums may be used, although fresh ones are preferable. Either the purple or green gage plums can be used, and if they are not very flavorful, a teaspoonful of lemon juice can be poured over them. This will intensify the flavor.

HUNGARIAN PLUM CAKE
1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup flour
10 plums
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Put the butter in a bowl that has been rinsed out with very hot water, so that it will soften slightly. Add one-half cup of the sugar and one egg and stir briskly until thoroughly mixed. Throw Away All Those Monstrosities With Angular, Jagged Cuts With Set Surrounding Lines and Outfit Yourself Anew With Softer Effects

By Ann Roberts

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

AFTER the Easter parade—what a shock! You knew that this happy season—so late and warm and all—would throw into open flower all the feminine sprouts of style that had been so widely heralded. It did. And how!

Personally I felt after one long walk about the town on that dressy day as though I needed to be rescued from a dense and chaotic wilderness— from a fog of dripping, drooping, flowering, fluttering headpieces.

So many of them were good and so many bad that I contemplated: What under the great, wide sky would I do for a hat if I had not been thinking, sleeping, breathing, trying hats for weeks before and on end? You had just as well blindfold me and let me grab. I'd be as successful that way.

Accept This New Flattery

The great millinery secret of the season is that the new hats have given you back your charm, your sweetness, your beauty, even your elegance if you will have it that way.

Are you glad that all those small fellows with tight, naked foreheads and all those angular, jagged cuts with set surrounding lines have disappeared? For they have. They're as dead as last year's rose. Then take my advice. Stage a murder scene in or about your own wardrobe and kill those unbecoming monstrosities that your friends hated you in and that, your friends hated too. Don't give them away—not even to the cook. Do a deed of benevolence and rid the world once and for all of their pernicious influence.

Now all the new hat lines are curved and soft. They follow the contour of the head—oh yes. They're a total loss if they miss that trick. But they are bent and shaped most gracefully, announcing their willingness to hide any bad bumps and to bring into bold relief any features that God has allowed to approach perfection. Brims are back. They haven't been so good for years past as they are now. They're in and they're supremely well done.

Don't forget the hat's Poise
This year you can pull your hat down over one eye and feel as rakish as you please—if you happen to be that sort of person. You can suit your mood to the type, or, better still, an artistic and well trained milliner can suit them for you. Then you must learn to put on that hat or you are blind to fashion's ways.

Please keep your hat off your forehead. Push it way back, with no hair showing above the eyes. All crowns are small and shallow and the hat of the future is to be handled. But—and here is the sweetest bit of news—pull your hair out at the sides where it can do its prettiest curve to make the hat becoming.

Don't get too rash with the curly locks and let them go wispy or loosely, but use them for all they're worth in the game of "softness"—and it femininity if you will. It's yours.

Hats in Three Classes
No longer is it possible to own one precious hat, to wear it with everything and call it a day. That careless careless period is over. Faces look like faces now, not like so many mannequins all the same and nicely hidden.

There are hats for three periods of the day and that's that. Try to lop them over one into the other's place and feel how funny it is to be out of the picture. You'll rush for cover and the hat of the hour or I don't know my sisters.

Then for morning with the suit or street costume:
The beret is most important this year especially in Milan and soft lovely straws and of course, felt or fur. It is just right to put on now to wear with your suit. This is true also of the hat formed from a combination of straw and felt. Then there is the hat in straw or felt made with the small brim. The hat that is draped with not too decided a swoop. Straws that are sunny and well blocked. The shellac straw success is Porte Bonheur. It is made with a small brim turned back over one eye and caught with a bow of grosgrain ribbon run through that tiny width of brim.

For afternoon:
Wider brims in panama, baculac and the soft natural finished straws. Straws with a duller finish for this time of day. Faces of linen or pique—sometimes silk, such as shantung or fallie in white or opaline. Trimmings not too much of narrow silk or velvet ribbons and flowers. The flowers in this connection must be most restrained. Gardenias are best—in pink or white pique.

For formal wear:
Hats with very wide brims—many with the mushroom brim that is so becoming—very dainty. The brims, fashioned by hand from lace straws or materials such as organza and tulle (these for bridesmaids), lace straw or satin.

For evening:
The dinner hat of the small moulded type of tulle, lace or straw worn with informal dinner gowns for restaurant dining. Please don't wear them to anything that's the least bit formal, but remember classes are said and done. Look, then, to the more picturesque, the wider brimmed, the more consistently draped and delicate an ensemble or which you can be proud in this day of particular flattery. For the beret—don't forget the little jeweled clips which are awfully smart and brighten up black hats most successfully. Ask for the widest brim that it is one of the year's new fashions.

Which Hat For When and Who
Don't fool yourself and try to ride over your narrow brimmed, well tailored hat to the chiffon and silk dress class. This combination will damp you for style, sure as fate. That silk or chiffon frock be it dressy or plain, you cannot and you will not live without but you must honor it with its own hat, otherwise the effect is gone. The style is lost and you feel a mess where, with that one ounce of care, you might be so chic and so above style suspicion.

For these softer clothes, have a brim by all means but look to the size of that brim with an eagle eye. They send us news from Paris that the wide cart wheel hats are coming back. Don't let that news run away with your better judgment.

Are you tall? And thin? Then go the limit. Ask for the widest brim and revel in it. But as your height decreases (perhaps as your weight increases) pull back the width of that brim. I do hope that this summer we are not going to have an army of short women completely submerged under too exaggerated brims. There is a pitfall. Watch it.

The Too Fatal Lure of Lace

Transparent lace straws are among the new ones. Like that tradition of old-fashioned lace, they are very good and when they are bad. By no means attempt to wear one of them with daytime or street things. That much is simple. And for afternoon or evening be very careful. When the dress is printed—not a chance for a lace hat. Too much pattern over everything. When the dress or evening dress is plain, then try the lace hat in the same color or black and if it is supremely good, then have it.

Where the Beret Is Best
The beret is the best of style. Sensitize yourself to its note of harmony. With street things—Yes. With sports things—Yes. Now stop. Forget this type of hat when those two

Hobbies

"LAST year, he went in for stamp collecting, and had everybody crazy keeping stamps for him. This year he's making radio sets and spending all his money on parts. I wonder what it will be next?" a father said to me recently, his criticism being slightly tinged with pride.

Shouldn't we encourage rather than criticize the children's hobbies? Aren't they healthful occupations which not only keep the young ones amused and happy, but also constantly add to their store of information and skill? And suppose one hobby does supersede another with startling celerity? Each will contribute its share to the child's growth. Through trying out many different interests and occupations, a youngster may finally settle upon an absorbing one. Let us hope he will be able, eventually, to make this his life work!

Why do so many people dislike their vocations? Because they are doing work they have chosen, but work they have "fallen into." These few fortunate people who are doing things they love are victors, playing instead of working, and will probably always continue to do so. If our children have a chance to try out many different activities, they will be able, perhaps, to find the one that most interests them, and for which they are best fitted. How much happier their lives will be if they are able to follow these interests as their life work!

But even if the children's hobbies do not lead to future vocations, in most instances they will enrich their adulthood. I have known several wealthy men who intensely disliked taking vacations. They had no interests outside their businesses, and hence were most unhappy away from them. Our youngsters who have had a chance to experiment with photography, to raise goldfish, to try their hands at cooking, to learn to play a drum or a banjo, to do a little modelling, to write fairly good poetry, to play tennis or golf, these youngsters won't ever feel time hanging heavily on their hands!

At every stage the child should be encouraged to pursue his hobby as intently as he desires. Some hobbies will last but a short while, others may last a lifetime. But whether for short or for long, the hobby will help the youngster in his growth and will enrich his life!

Think It Over

By Alfalfa Smith

ISN'T it wonderful how many people are sick these days? Talk about changing the calendar, why not have it date from each person's operation, or their last illness?

If some one commits a crime you do not hear him going around talking about it, do you? Then why is it necessary to dwell so long on that last operation, or the fact that you were ill with the grip?

Let's talk about something pleasant.

Worth Knowing

When packing trunks away for the summer be sure to grease them first, but do not use fat containing salt, as this produces rust; mutton fat is excellent, and after rubbing the iron with this, wrap in brown paper and you will find them in good condition when you use them again.

TRADES THAT ARE BOOMING

PRELIMINARY report of the Government's survey of unemployment. Your committee begs to report that after painstaking investigation unemployment is found to be on the decrease. An upward trend is noted in the following trades:

1. INNOCENT BYSTANDING. At no time since 1922 have so many adults been employed in so many departments of innocent bystanding. Whereas in the Chicago district there were only 11.4 innocent bystanders per street shooting a year ago, to-day each bombing, slugging or killing is being accomplished with an average of 18.7 innocent bystanders.

A census of curbstones in other important cities reveals a gradual, yet definite, increase in innocent bystanding. Sitting on park benches has also shown a steady growth.

2. PUZZLE CONTESTS. Never before in the history of the country have so many people been engaged in answering puzzles as now. Since Jan. 1 so many coupons have been torn out, it seems as if steam shovels must have been required to fill them in. This healthy growth of the puzzle contest, answering industry indicates optimism for 1930 is reaching a new high.

3. BIRD AND DOG STORE LOOKING. This division of industry was at a low ebb in January due to blizzards and cold weather. But with the return of better Government weather bulletins it has quickly taken on new life. To-day the average bird and dog store has an average of 47.1 persons gazing in its windows at the puppies alone. When those occupied in gazing at the canine birds and guinea pigs are added, we have the amazing total of 76 window watchers per bird and dog store. This figure has never been exceeded since 1899, the year of the white mice craze.

4. SEASONAL TRADES. Some of the seasonal trades are admittedly slack. This is the first spring since 1927 that C. C. Pile has not had a union derby in progress. The abandonment of this industry alone has thrown more than 200 useful citizens out of work, not including chiropractors and water blister puncturers. In the cigar trades, thousands of skilled laborers formerly engaged in putting an ugly four-letter word on the tips of cigars have been laid off. Some of these have taken up spitting on the sidewalk to earn a living, but many are still unemployed.

The flagpole sitting business is also in a slump, due to overproduction. Marathon dancing is also slightly off, but the demand is liable to pick up any day now.

A seasonal trade that has leaped to new high figures this year, however, is Easter egg-felling. This year was the best showing ever made and President Hoover is justly reaping the credit.

5. WATCHING SAFES BEING HOISTED. Despite Democratic propaganda to the contrary, there has never been a time when this basic industry has engaged the full-time attention of so many men. In Portland, Me., last Monday morning, 218 persons were engaged in watching a small office safe being hoisted to the third story of a building. A year ago only 174 turned out to see a safe twice as large being hoisted to the top floor of an eleven-story building. This is an example of how the industry has expanded in the last twelve months.

Another concrete illustration of the healthy condition of this trade is in Los Angeles, where 1,200 persons watched a bank vault being moved in on the ground floor, with no hoisting done at all.

The crowd, sensing danger, stood mute and trembling. Pigeon, weakened by his beating, dragged himself away. Tom waited for Shep to speak. But the whip man didn't speak immediately. His surprised gaze gave way, when he recognized Tom Allen, to a smile of satisfaction. It was the smile of a man about to participate in a long-awaited joy.

When Shep noticed that Tom continued to cling to the whipstock he found himself at loss for words. Obviously, he dared not yield any ground to the white man, but he shrewdly saw that he could make no auspicious start against him without full possession of the whip. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

"What I mean is this," Tom answered heatedly, taking a firmer grasp on the whip and thrusting it close to Shep's face: "If you ever strike another white man with that I'll ram it down your throat." He released the whip and stood back.

Shep was stunned, not so much by Tom's audacity as by the fact that he had been challenged before the eyes of the natives and whites alike. He stared at the whip and then at Tom.

"I ought to use this whip on you till you beg for mercy," he told Tom. The Englishman shrugged. "But," added Shep, "I ain't goin' to do it." Then, before the relief of the crowd could find expressions, Shep flung the whip from him and advanced on Tom, his face livid with rage.

"I'm going to whip you without the whip," he belovied, his rage mounting. "Black knuckles against white knuckles—dat's how I'm goin' to whip you!" As he spoke his voice rose to a shrieking treble until it sounded like the fierce whistle of a hurricane.

Choosing offense as the best defense against the maniacal black, Tom lunged toward him. Only to find himself blocked by Eric. "Don't be a fool, Tom!" he cried. "I can't afford to make an issue with Shep now."

But Tom fought to free himself. Shep made no move. His rage, diminished somewhat by Tom's readiness to fight it out, now vanished completely. Shep had sounded his challenge. That was enough. But Tom was eager for a settlement in full.

"Let me go," he painted, "this is my affair, Eric."

"This is not your affair," said Eric sternly.

"Here's my whip," Shep reminded the group. "Why don't we coward and go and git it?"

Tom renewed his efforts to liberate himself. "I'll get it," he promised Shep stormily, "don't worry. Who did that?" he demanded suddenly as some flying object knocked his hat off. A soft laugh greeted him, and, looking up, he saw Dawn on the balcony. She laughed again and glided down the wavering bamboo steps.

Shep. Dawn threw him an unfriendly glance. "Perhaps," she suggested, "Dawn came just in time."

She crossed over to Tom quickly and addressing him as Bwana, heaved a sigh. "I had to retrieve his hat," she murmured. "So sorry you lost your hat," she murmured. She did not intend her regrets to sound facetious, but Tom, upset by her sudden appearance was unable to smile.

"Don't be angry, Tom," she whispered. She smiled hoping for a smile in return.

"This is no laughing matter," Tom said. "I'm sorry you came, Dawn."

"He ain't sorry you came, Dawn," broke in Shep. "I'm sorry." He picked up his whip and, gripping it firmly, stood as if ready to apply it to Tom. Encountering no rebuke, he ventured a threat.

"Dawn better go back where she came from," he advised. "I told I'm goin' to wear dis whip out on dat man."

All laughter left Dawn's eyes. They blazed with scorn as she stepped quickly before Shep and began to leave. Dawn looked at the tones. Fearlessly she assailed his cowardice while he stood speechless, bewildered by her sudden fury.

"I want that whip, Shep!" Dawn spoke a command.

Shep hesitated, began to sputter a defiant rejoinder and then decided to remain quiet. Feeling extremely foolish, he meekly surrendered his precious weapon. He respected this businesslike tone of Dawn's. Dawn looked at the whip as one would look upon a particularly loathsome reptile. Then, with all her strength, she threw it from her. The

PASSAGE OF TARIFF ACT DELAYED

WASHINGTON, May 7.—UP—Senators who indicated they would oppose the entire tariff bill, if the Senate losses on its debenture and flexible amendments, today forced postponement of ratification of more than 1200 amendments.

The bill was sent back to a conference for adjustment of differences between the Senate coalition and the Hoover administration, on the flexible and debenture and a few other items.

This is a parliamentary step, as the two groups are as far apart as the poles. If the administration men dominating the conference committee strike down the state's debenture farm bounty plan, and its repeal of the president's flexible power—as they probably will—the fight comes back to the Senate floor, where so far the coalition has dominated. If the administration gains a few votes, the bill will be re-moulded to the president's desires and passed—otherwise a stalemate will occur and the bill will fail altogether. Regular Republican leaders are confident they have the Senate votes to win.

Finance Chairman Snoot asked the Senate today to approve the conference report with the exception of the half-dozen items on which the first conference committee was unable to agree.

Senator Walsh, Dem., Mont., interjected that he was disposed to oppose the whole bill and report if the Senate debenture and flexible amendments are eliminated in conference and that action is upheld by the Senate.

Several Democrats sought to find out if this acceptance would mean final approval of the bill. Snoot said that no bill could be enacted, if the two houses did not come to some agreement on the still disputed amendments, but the Democrats nevertheless protested and forced the bill back to conference without acting on the items agreed to.

NOMINATION OF PARKER TO SUPREME COURT REJECTED

when he was advised of the vote, shortly after it was completed at 1:41.

He now has several alternatives in filling the position vacated by the death of Justice Sanford of Tennessee. He can, if he wishes, send back Parker's name, but this is deemed unlikely; he can nominate another man before congress adjourns and give some one other than Parker a recess appointment, under which he could take a seat in October, two months before the senate returns.

The senate galleries were filled with an excited crowd, including hundreds of women, and nearly every senate seat was occupied when the roll call was taken. The atmosphere was charged as the youthful LaFollette demanded a quorum call, to make certain that all the senators were summoned for the vote.

Senators Bolt Steiwer, of Oregon, gained a significant point for the opposition by announcing that he had transferred his pair with Grundy to the absent McMaster and voted "nay." Heretofore, so bitter has been the battle for votes that McMaster was unable to get a pair to offset his vote to allow him to return to South Dakota for the primary contest in which he was re-nominated.

Seventeen Republicans, including such men as Steiwer, Deneen, Robinson, of Indiana, and Vandenberg, all originally stalwart administrators and one former-laborer to beat Parker. The change of just one of these would have tied the vote, and vice-president Curtis would have had to cast the deciding vote.

On the other side, ten Democrats and 29 Republicans supported the nominee. The other twelve senators were all paired, six for and six against, offsetting each other, so that all 96 members actually exerted their influence on the result.

Borah, the Idaho orator, delivered the final blow against Parker. Closing a short speech defining the issue as "human rights," he spoke, through bangs of the vice-president's gavel, marking the arrival of the voting hour to point out that not a single senator during the long debate, has undertaken to defend the yellow-dog contract, the operation of which Parker upheld in the famous Red Jacket decision of the Fourth Circuit Court in 1927.

The Idahoan referred to Lincoln's statement about the Dred Scott decision, credited with the speeding of the civil war, to show the intention of the great Emancipator to change the supreme court by appointment, so it would reverse its own decision. Borah quoted Lincoln as saying "that he meant to reverse" the Dred Scott decision, defending his opposition to Parker as impersonal Borah referred the opposition of Webster and Clay and Calhoun and Ewins to the nomination of Taney, the great Jacksonian chief justice.

Senator Fess in a speech studded with historical references, chided the opposition for taking Parker's appointment as a target for the anti-yellow-dog contract fight. Such contracts should be cured by legislative enactment, he said. He denied that Parker's nomination was political.

The great struggle drew national attention, because it, unlike recent nominations of the past, was conducted in open session. This open fight, like the struggle of last March on President Hoover's appointment of Chief Justice Hughes, was made possible thru the change in the senate rules, voted last year after the United Press published secret session roll calls on the West and Lennox appointments.

Labor men regard the victory as one of the most notable of the modern industrial and "injunction" age.

LAVINE CASE GOES TO JURY

LOS ANGELES, May 7.—UP—The case of Morris Lavine, former newspaper reporter, and Miss Leontine Johnson, private secretary jointly accused of extortion thru use of information they obtained after the Julian Petroleum corporation collapse, was given to a jury here late today.

Unable to agree after seven hours and a half of deliberation, including a two hour dinner recess, the jury was locked up for the night.

Superior Judge R. B. Schauer, in instructing the jury, said it would have been legal for the defendants to have sold documents as they said they did. He ruled that no documents introduced in the trial should bear on the verdict as it concerned Miss Johnson.

Lavine was arrested when he left the office of Charles Crawford, politician and purported victim, with $75,000.

Miss Johnson was taken into custody when the district attorney's office charged that the pair extorted the money by threatening to name Crawford and others in a series of stories they were writing on the Julian Petroleum case.

Race Riot Feared In Washington

KENT, Wash., May 7.—U P—Hundreds of Filipino laborers tonight covered in filthy hovels as dark settled, fearing attacks of white workers, whose jobs they had taken.

State and county officers patrolled the roads, searching cars and watching for gatherings of whites, to prevent a recurrence of rioting, in which the Filipinos last night were beaten, kidnaped and driven from their camps. Barefooted, half clothed, and some times naked.

The white men said the Filipinos worked for less than half the wages they had obtained, and bitter feeling was shown thru-out the White River valley during the day.

In many instances, Japanese lettuce growers were the employers of the Filipinos.

Windows, broken during raids last night, let in cold blasts of foggy night air to the trembling of the little yellow men, as they huddled together in their shacks, where often more than a score slept side by side in a single room.

Newspapermen who visited the ranches where the Filipinos are employed, found almost indescribable filth in the shacks. The houses are built of rough lumber, often being of only one long room—mattresses are thrown on the floor and food hangs from the walls.

It was into such scenes as these that the night riders came, with pistols drawn. There was no shooting last night, but many of the Filipinos were beaten and fled through the fields in their bare feet, to cringe in the stream beds or scurry through the underbrush.

Bands of laborers went from ranch to ranch in automobiles, spreading terror. Reports of intoxication on the part of raiders were heard.

Owen McGill, in charge of state highway patrolmen, who was in charge of affairs for the state today, ordered a close guard to-night. Virtual martial law was in effect, with state and county officers joining in watching roadways and protecting the Filipinos.

Man Held In Bunco Game

PORTLAND, Ore., May 7.—UP—Edgar M. Sutton, 60, admitted gambler and bunco man, was held here today by police who expect to clear up a series of frauds and embezzlements over the country as a result of his arrest.

Records on file at police headquarters show that Sutton is wanted in Milwaukee, Wis., for swindling Tessa Wagner out of $15,000 and in Los Angeles for grand theft. Sutton is said to have swindled Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Ziegler of Aurora, Ore., out of $10,000 in 1928. The couple offered their home for sale and a man who gave his name as Marvin inquired about it. He persuaded the Zieglers to place $5,500 in cash with him for investment in stocks. Two other men, working with him, drew $300 more from the Zieglers and left Portland on the promise they would keep the couple posted on the market. They have not been heard from since.

NAVY VISITS AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, May 7.—UP—The American navy in all its glory paraded for New York today. The fleet filed majestically up the Hudson, an air armada droned overhead in thrilling formation.

There was a holiday air both in the hulking battleships returning from southern maneuvers and the washish fighting planes—136 of them—that combined to give the city the most impressive aerial display in history.

The holiday might have been in commemoration of the 13th anniversary of the sailing from Hoboken of the steamship Orunda. It was that vessel, on May 7, 1917, which slipped out of New York harbor with the first American troops to serve in the World war.

Coincident with the date of that embarkation and with the arrival of the naval craft, the liner America glided down the bay this afternoon with 232 mothers on board. They were bound for France—to land where their sons went adventuring—never to return. They go, with their gold stars, to the graves of their soldier dead.

It was astirring peace-time pageant, when the fleet came in with the 32,000 ton battleship California leading a gallant procession. By noon, 65 naval vessels were at anchorage. Thirty thousand sailors—pay in their pockets—were ready for shore leave.
